Pack 13. HR Letters Library | Ref: P13-00

Read this before you send anything. Which letter, in what order, and what breaks a case.

WHAT THIS PACK IS

Thirty-one letters an Indian HR team actually needs, in twelve files. Every letter carries a filled Indian example so you can see what good looks like before you edit it.

The letters are grouped by the moment they are used, not alphabetically, because the order matters more than the wording. Issuing the right letter in the wrong sequence is how employers lose cases they should win.

THE FOUR THINGS THAT DECIDE A DISCIPLINARY CASE

1. The charge must be specific. Date, time, place, a short factual summary, and the names of everyone involved. A vague charge sheet is no enquiry in the eyes of law. "Insubordination over a period of time" is an opinion, not a charge.
2. Natural justice is not optional. The employee must be told the charge in writing, be allowed to lead evidence, have management's evidence taken in their presence, and be allowed to cross-examine witnesses.
3. Subsistence allowance must be paid during suspension. Section 38 of the Industrial Relations Code 2020. Non-payment can vitiate the whole enquiry on its own, however sound everything else was. This is the single most common omission.
4. Punishment follows the finding, not the other way round. You cannot decide the outcome first and run the enquiry to justify it. That is why there is a second show cause on punishment, issued only after the findings are recorded.

Warning Letters

Pack 13. HR Letters Library | Ref: P13-02

Counselling record, first written warning, final written warning. Three letters, one escalation.

HOW TO USE THESE THREE

They escalate. Do not skip a step unless the conduct is serious enough to go straight to a charge sheet, and if it is, use file 03 instead of a warning.

Each one has to name the specific incident. A warning that says "your performance has been unsatisfactory" is unusable later, because the employee was never told what to fix.

LETTER 1. COUNSELLING RECORD

Not a warning. A documented conversation. Use it the first time, where the conduct is minor and you expect it to resolve. It matters because it establishes that the employee was told.

COUNSELLING RECORD

Date: [DD Month YYYY]
Employee: [Name], [Employee ID], [Designation], [Department]
Present: [Manager name and designation], [HR representative name]

WHAT WAS DISCUSSED
On [date], [state the specific observation factually: for example, "the monthly vendor reconciliation due on 5 October was submitted on 14 October, nine days late. This was the third consecutive month in which it was late."]

WHAT WAS AGREED
[For example: "The reconciliation will be submitted by the 5th of each month. Where a delay is unavoidable, it will be flagged to the reporting manager at least two working days in advance."]

SUPPORT OFFERED
[For example: "Access to the updated vendor master has been arranged. A refresher session with the finance team is scheduled for 20 October."]

REVIEW DATE
[Date, typically 30 days]

This is a record of a counselling discussion. It is not a disciplinary warning.
